

ADMIN Tim

November 18, 2016 - 10:49 pm

Hi Janet, thanks for coming to the chatroom!

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 10:50 pm

My pleasure!

Lorna Wanstall

November 18, 2016 - 10:50 pm

Although I'm seriously tempted to strangle dinosaur..LOL

ADMIN Tim

November 18, 2016 - 10:50 pm

Be nice to Dinosaur

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 10:51 pm

Thank you for having me! This is the first time I will really interact with readers - outside of comments which are inherently asynchronous. So exciting!

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 10:51 pm

OK, that was too long a comment, wasn't it!

Dawn Hatswell

November 18, 2016 - 10:51 pm

Evening everyone, from a very cold and frosty part of Scotland

Lorna Wanstall

November 18, 2016 - 10:51 pm

Yeah he isn't a bad old dinosaur really, well when he's asleep that is..

ADMIN Tim

November 18, 2016 - 10:51 pm

Real time chatting is fun, and we're a nice lot.

Claire Ridgway

November 18, 2016 - 10:52 pm

Good evening everyone!

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 10:52 pm

Lorna Wanstall

November 18, 2016 - 10:52 pm

Hi Claire..

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 10:52 pm

Hi, Claire!

Dawn Hatswell

November 18, 2016 - 10:52 pm

Hello there

ADMIN Tim

November 18, 2016 - 10:52 pm

We'll be officially starting in about 5 minutes.

Adrienne Dillard

November 18, 2016 - 10:53 pm

Hello all!

Claire Ridgway

November 18, 2016 - 10:53 pm

Hi Janet, it's lovely to have you here and thank you for the kind mentions of my work in your talk.

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 10:53 pm

Hi Adrienne! (I'm starting to get the hang of this!)

Lorna Wanstall

November 18, 2016 - 10:53 pm

We all have a lot of fun here Janet.

ADMIN Tim

November 18, 2016 - 10:53 pm

Hi Adrienne, lovely to see you here.

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 10:54 pm

Thank you Claire for the immense body of work you have created!

Adrienne Dillard

November 18, 2016 - 10:54 pm

Hi Janet and Tim! Nice to be here

Claire Ridgway

November 18, 2016 - 10:55 pm

I'm glad it was useful!

Lorna Wanstall

November 18, 2016 - 10:56 pm

Dawn have you got any snow up in Scotland yet..

Sharon Conrad

November 18, 2016 - 10:56 pm

Hi everyone.

Dawn Hatswell

November 18, 2016 - 10:57 pm

Yes had a sprinkle early morn yesterday

Dawn Hatswell

November 18, 2016 - 10:57 pm

Ton

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 10:57 pm

Hi Sharon!

Dawn Hatswell

November 18, 2016 - 10:57 pm

But disappeared quickly, LOADS on y

ADMIN Tim

November 18, 2016 - 10:57 pm

Well, thank you everyone for coming to tonight's livechat session with Janet Wertman. Janet is the author of "Jane the Quene" - I would like to officially call the event OPEN. Please feel free to ask your questions to Janet.

Dawn Hatswell

November 18, 2016 - 10:57 pm

T

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 10:58 pm

Woo! Bring 'em on!

Dawn Hatswell

November 18, 2016 - 10:58 pm

Loads few miles above us though

Lorna Wanstall

November 18, 2016 - 10:58 pm

It's more cold than anything down here in Kent, was lovely and sunny this morning though

Claire Ridgway

November 18, 2016 - 10:58 pm

What drew you to Jane's story, Janet?

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 10:59 pm

I actually started out writing about Anne....

Claire Ridgway

November 18, 2016 - 10:59 pm

But Jane took over!

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 10:59 pm

It was going to be her secret diary that would be read by Elizabeth

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:00 pm

But Robin Maxwell got the same idea and was more diligent than I was!

Claire Ridgway

November 18, 2016 - 11:00 pm

Ah, that's interesting! Thank you.

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:00 pm

So I switched to Jane and actually found that some of the most interesting bits of Anne's story are best not seen through Anne's eyes

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:01 pm

And then of course I got completely into Jane...and the rest of the Seymours

Lorna Wanstall

November 18, 2016 - 11:01 pm

Poor Jane we know had a difficult labour, lost a lot of blood too is it entirely possible that part of her problems in giving birth to Edward is because she had placenta previa.

Adrienne Dillard

November 18, 2016 - 11:02 pm

What was the most surprising thing you found out in your research? About Jane or Anne?

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:02 pm

I love that we are now getting such a good medical understanding - like Kyra Kramer's new book about Edward VI

Dawn Hatswell

November 18, 2016 - 11:03 pm

I think she would have died near enough straight away with that Lorna,

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:03 pm

Adrienne, that's such a great question but I'm racking my brains. I can't say that I was really surprised by anything I found...

Lorna Wanstall

November 18, 2016 - 11:05 pm

Thank you Dawn.

Adrienne Dillard

November 18, 2016 - 11:05 pm

Fair enough!

Dawn Hatswell

November 18, 2016 - 11:05 pm

I can never make my mind up about Jane, what do you think she was like, a doormat or a schemer

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:05 pm

I think it was more the little things that hit me - like the fact that she found out about her father's death right around the time that the Thames froze (a wondrous event)...I used that in Jane the Quene because I think she also had a miscarriage right around there

Lorna Wanstall

November 18, 2016 - 11:06 pm

Jane certainly had a rough time of it through

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:06 pm

Beause of the whole "Edward, Edward" thing Henry did putting his hand on her belly when Mary came to court

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:06 pm

Dawn, I think she was a little of both

Adrienne Dillard

November 18, 2016 - 11:06 pm

Very interesting. I love those little details.

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:07 pm

I think she listened to the people around her but also had a lot of internal determination to make things work out the way she wanttred

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:08 pm

Adrienne, it's the little details that are the most fun. Like the fact that the shrieks of the condemned men at Tyburn were drowned out by street sellers hawking pies...

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:08 pm

Lorna, I fully agree

Dawn Hatswell

November 18, 2016 - 11:08 pm

I always liken her to the Mona Lisa, you can't make out what's going on behind the Scenes, so to speak lol

Lorna Wanstall

November 18, 2016 - 11:08 pm

What were her motives or reasons behind be friending Mary, was it just to show her a bit of motherly love or did she really intend to getmary to be re instated as heir.

Sharon Conrad

November 18, 2016 - 11:08 pm

We never know what she was thinking.

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:08 pm

Dawn, I never thought of it that way but you are absolutely right.

Lorna Wanstall

November 18, 2016 - 11:09 pm

I really must get the marmalade out of this Keyboard..

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:09 pm

Lorna, I think that she naturally loved and respected Mary. They had a long relationship since Jane served Catherine of Aragon.

Dawn Hatswell

November 18, 2016 - 11:09 pm

Her family certainly had a colourful life

Claire Ridgway

November 18, 2016 - 11:10 pm

I'd love to know what she thought about the events of May 1536...

Lorna Wanstall

November 18, 2016 - 11:10 pm

I do feel that Jane is really one of histories Enigmas

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:10 pm

Yeah! The whole scandal with the dad...I'm writing about it right now (I'm in the middle of Catherine Howard's downfall...and Edward is commiserating with Henry and remembering his own Katherine)

Dawn Hatswell

November 18, 2016 - 11:10 pm

What makes you think she miscarried

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:11 pm

Claire, that was indeed the crux of the book. How she found out and came to terms with it...I had her discover that Anne was to die while they were out hunting - just to get a little spooky with it

Dawn Hatswell

November 18, 2016 - 11:12 pm

Ddcvbbh

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:12 pm

Dawn, when Mary returned to court, Henry turns to everyone and says "Some of you wanted me to put this jewel to death." Jane replies that would have been a shame to lose your chiefest jewel of England" and he reaches out and pats her belly with a "nay, Edward, Edward."

Lorna Wanstall

November 18, 2016 - 11:15 pm

I don't believe our Henry really saw Jane as wife material, but after Anne's murder, I think everyone took it for granted that marriage was what he intended from the start.

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:15 pm

So what did you guys think of my Cromwell? Did you forgive him?

Ceri Creffield

November 18, 2016 - 11:15 pm

How much do you think Jane was her own woman - and how much controlled by her brother?

Dawn Hatswell

November 18, 2016 - 11:15 pm

And that event of the patting of the belly was too early for her to be carrying Edward?

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:15 pm

[I'm assuming you forgave Jane...if it hadn't been her taking Anne's place it would have been someone else...]

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:17 pm

Way too early. This was December, Edward was born the following October. I did a lot of counting!!

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:18 pm

Ceri, I think Jane was a lot of her own woman. I think Edward helped but did not control. Then again, I made him a teeny bit bumbling...he's got his own growth before he comes into power

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:19 pm

Lorna, I think he was ready to marry her pretty early...especially after she refused the purse of sovereigns! Henry was a romantic (or thought he was), don't forget

Dawn Hatswell

November 18, 2016 - 11:21 pm

So she must have conceived again very quickly if Henry was suggesting she was pregnant then to give birth the following October,

Lorna Wanstall

November 18, 2016 - 11:21 pm

Yes this is true, but I read some where that shortly after his marriage to Jane he saw a beautiful young woman at court and is suppose to have remarked "would to God I had seen this woman first for I would not been married to her I now have?"

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:22 pm

Lorna, he did that about a week after they were married...

Lorna Wanstall

November 18, 2016 - 11:23 pm

Henry a Romantic? he was about as romantic as an exocet missile, and about as deadly as one too.

Dawn Hatswell

November 18, 2016 - 11:23 pm

Who is meant to have said that Lorna, apart from my hubby, lol

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:23 pm

Dawn, yes she did.

Lorna Wanstall

November 18, 2016 - 11:23 pm

not a very nice thing to say though

Michelle Nasello

November 18, 2016 - 11:23 pm

Wow, Henry was quite full of himself I guess.

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:24 pm

Yes, Michelle, he was QUITE full of himself

Ceri Creffield

November 18, 2016 - 11:24 pm

The trouble with Henry was that he was always looking for a woman who would live up to his romantic ideals - and no one could.

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:24 pm

Can you imagine?

Lorna Wanstall

November 18, 2016 - 11:24 pm

Henry has as many facets as a rubics cube each one more complex than the next.

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:25 pm

Ceri, except for Jane (and part of that was because she died and allowed him to maintain the fantasy of the perfect woman)

Dawn Hatswell

November 18, 2016 - 11:25 pm

Henry wanted to marry his mother, metaphorically speaking

Ceri Creffield

November 18, 2016 - 11:26 pm

Yes, he certainly idealised her.

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:27 pm

And that comment was nowhere near as bad as his "Unless you wish to follow Mistress Boleyn's end, you will cease to meddle in my affairs" when she interceded for the Pilgrims!

Ceri Creffield

November 18, 2016 - 11:27 pm

Yes, Jane becomes a sort of icon after her death.

Roland Hui

November 18, 2016 - 11:27 pm

Janet - What do you think Jane's attitude was towards little the Princess Elizabeth?

Lorna Wanstall

November 18, 2016 - 11:27 pm

We've all heard of the 7 deadly sins, well Henry exploited everyone of them to the max.

Lorna Wanstall

November 18, 2016 - 11:30 pm

If Jane had borne a daughter or a dead child, how would Henry react?

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:30 pm

Roland, I think that was the sad part. I think Elizabeth made her uncomfortable. Jane gave Mary rich presents, treated her beautifully, got her back to court. Elizabeth was at home with her governess begging for money to buy new clothes once she grew out of all the ones Anne got for her

Dawn Hatswell

November 18, 2016 - 11:30 pm

He certainly did love her, but I don't think he was on his own in those days

Sharon Conrad

November 18, 2016 - 11:32 pm

Jane may have not spoken about Elizabeth due to Henry's attitude though, right?

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:32 pm

The governess begging, not Elizabeth... That really was such a tragedy. Posterity recorded her saying "Why yesterday was it 'my lady princess' and today it is but 'my lady Elizabeth'" - but not the answer she received.

Dawn Hatswell

November 18, 2016 - 11:32 pm

Jane being uncomfortable... Because of who her mother was ?

Ceri Creffield

November 18, 2016 - 11:32 pm

Maybe she was picking her battles carefully, Dawn.

Lorna Wanstall

November 18, 2016 - 11:32 pm

Although he called Jane his only true wife, I don't believe he really felt that in his heart, He loved Jane for the son she bore him, but loving her for her, nope I don't think so.

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:33 pm

Lorna, I'm not sure how Henry would have reacted. Cromwell had worked the legal side out so that Henry could choose his successor, so to a great extent Jane was off the hook...Dawn Hatswell

November 18, 2016 - 11:35 pm

Nor do I love her, he elated her to perfection because of the boy child in my opinion anyway. As he would have any wife who bore him kids

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:36 pm

Dawn and Ceri, exactly. Plus I don't think this was a battle that Jane would choose in the first place. Partly because of guilt - but also because I think Jane was "Team Catherine" and disliked Anne (certainly the way Anne treated her - admittedly after Henry had expressed interest - would justify that assumption).

Dawn Hatswell

November 18, 2016 - 11:36 pm

Maybe she was Ceri, never thought of that...

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:38 pm

Dawn, I agree with the mother thing. I tried to draw that idea out a little bit in the scene when Henry and Jane are in the garden at Wolf Hall...

Dawn Hatswell

November 18, 2016 - 11:38 pm

How do you suppose she ran her Court Janet, was she strict with her ladies, was she one for having 'fun' do you think

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:40 pm

So tell me - I know most people are "team Anne" - how hard was it to consider reading a book about Jane?

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:41 pm

Dawn, I don't think Jane was much fun! Remember, she made everyone trash their French hoods after all!

Michelle Nasello

November 18, 2016 - 11:42 pm

Was Jane as simple as they say? Was she like Anne & Mary, travelled and been to other courts?

Ceri Creffield

November 18, 2016 - 11:42 pm

It's always interesting to read books based on all sorts of people from the Henrician court, whether you "like" them or not.

Lorna Wanstall

November 18, 2016 - 11:42 pm

I find it fascinating to compare the differences between Anne and Jane, the only way I can compare them is fire (Anne) Ice (Jane). Why was Henry drawn to Ice.

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:42 pm

She also was pretty picky about how her ladies dressed - there is a great series of letters with Lady Lisle talking about exactly what dresses and such the girl(s) would need

Claire Ridgway

November 18, 2016 - 11:43 pm

I agree with Ceri, I love getting fictional different perspectives of life at court.

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:43 pm

Lorna, the "ice" was the complete opposite of the fire. I think that's the key here.

Laurie

November 18, 2016 - 11:43 pm

I actually don't look at it as either "Team Anne" or "Team Jane" since their stories and circumstances are so different, it is really tough to even compare them!

Sharon Conrad

November 18, 2016 - 11:44 pm

Not a problem for me. All of the women in Henry's court are fascinating to read about.

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:44 pm

Michelle, I think she was a little simple...there are some people who say she was at the French court with Anne and Mary Boleyn but I don't think so. She was not as polished, not as...anything...as the Boleyn girls

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:44 pm

Thank you Ceri!

Dawn Hatswell

November 18, 2016 - 11:45 pm

My first book was on Jane believe it or not, lol, albeit a fictional one from the 70s. I was drawn into the Tudors by the BBC drama series too Janet

Ceri Creffield

November 18, 2016 - 11:46 pm

I hadn't heard that people thought she had been in France - that doesn't fit in with my picture of her at all!

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:46 pm

Laurie, I ask because of the Twitter fights I have gotten into with Queen Anne Boleyn who regularly tweets "You walked through my blood"! Of course, she PMd me after one of the "fights" to make sure I was okay..

Dawn Hatswell

November 18, 2016 - 11:46 pm

the book was by Frances Clark..

Michelle Nasello

November 18, 2016 - 11:46 pm

Again, Henry having polar opposite woman. Strange man!

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:46 pm

Dawn, which one?

Laurie

November 18, 2016 - 11:47 pm

LOL, yes I guess some people take it much more seriously!!

Lorna Wanstall

November 18, 2016 - 11:47 pm

I love the 1970's series about "enry and his victims. with the wonderful Keith Michell playing "enry

Claire Ridgway

November 18, 2016 - 11:47 pm

I've never been into the whole team thing, they're all fascinating women.

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:48 pm

Ceri and Claire, that is so true. It was fun to read Nancy Bilyeau's book (about a made up character) because it let the protagonist move through different factions in a way we hadn't seen before

Lorna Wanstall

November 18, 2016 - 11:48 pm

Agreed Claire, each of "enry's wives have their pros and Cons..although most of us love Anne the most

Michelle Nasello

November 18, 2016 - 11:49 pm

So true Calire, a very diverse group of women who floated their way in and out of his life.

Laurie

November 18, 2016 - 11:49 pm

Janet, what do you think about Jane's relationship with her brother Thomas? They don't seem to have been as close as her and Edward were?

Claire Ridgway

November 18, 2016 - 11:50 pm

Anne obviously interests me the most but I've never felt that I've had to pick sides.

ADMIN Tim

November 18, 2016 - 11:50 pm

Just ten minutes to go ... keep your questions coming in.

Ceri Creffield

November 18, 2016 - 11:50 pm

Janet, I think that Jane made very few changes to her ladies, keeping most who had served Anne, so they would have had to make that adjustment to a different faction in real life. That is often absent from fiction about that period.

Michelle Nasello

November 18, 2016 - 11:50 pm

Oops, sorry Claire

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:50 pm

Michelle, I am laughing right now because they were so very diverse...though you do get the foreign princess/Howard girl/plain English girl and the divorced/beheaded/died(survived) thing going!

Claire Ridgway

November 18, 2016 - 11:50 pm

Don't worry Michelle!

Lorna Wanstall

November 18, 2016 - 11:51 pm

Anne was a remarkable woman, and I believe she sowed the seeds of woman

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:51 pm

Laurie, I don't know that Jane was as close with Tom. I certainly don't

Lorna Wanstall

November 18, 2016 - 11:51 pm

Woman equality

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:52 pm

Oops...I hit return too quickly. Laurie I think Jane was closer with Edward than with Tom. Though maybe that was just a behind the scenes thing that we'll never know

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:53 pm

Ceri, I think you are right. Basically, there was very little difference between the roster of Anne's ladies and the roster of Jane's!

Dawn Hatswell

November 18, 2016 - 11:53 pm

I answered the question before you asked Janet, Francis Clark was the author of the book

Laurie

November 18, 2016 - 11:54 pm

Thanks Janet! And so do you think that Jane also became close with Lady Rochford since she kept her as one of her ladies too?

Lorna Wanstall

November 18, 2016 - 11:54 pm

I'm inclined to agree with you there Janet, Tom S was a very loose cannon I think

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:54 pm

Dawn, I think I may actually have a copy of that book - it's an old 1950s-ish thing, right?

Michelle Nasello

November 18, 2016 - 11:55 pm

But the ladies were at court to serve and get husbands weren't they? So many might not of had an allegiance to the Lady they served.

Dawn Hatswell

November 18, 2016 - 11:55 pm

Perhaps Tom was too much of a Risk taker and unpredictable for Jane, Edward seems to be more staid and sensible

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:56 pm

Laurie, I think that the two Janes probably got along pretty well. In earlier drafts of the book I had them really kindred spirits, with Anne disliking both of them, but then I stepped back from that.

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:56 pm

Laurie, I think that the two Janes probably got along pretty well. In earlier drafts of the book I had them really kindred spirits, with Anne disliking both of them, but then I stepped back from that.

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:57 pm

Dawn, I agree. Though after Tom's execution Edward seems to have inherited some of the recklessness!

ADMIN Tim

November 18, 2016 - 11:57 pm

Congratulations to Dawn - you are the winner of tonight's copy of "Jane the Quene" by Janet.

Lorna Wanstall

November 18, 2016 - 11:57 pm

Did "enry say anything along the lines of "save the child another wife can be found" when it became known Jane was having trouble, giving birth

Dawn Hatswell

November 18, 2016 - 11:57 pm

First printed in Britain 1967

Claire Ridgway

November 18, 2016 - 11:58 pm

Congratulations Dawn!

Lorna Wanstall

November 18, 2016 - 11:58 pm

Nice one Dawn Happy reading

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:58 pm

Michelle, I agree. The ladies were there to get husbands and to make alliances. Just like the men all kowtowing to Henry

Michelle Nasello

November 18, 2016 - 11:58 pm

Congratulations Dawn and thanks to Janet for a wonderful chat. Thanks everyone

Ceri Creffield

November 18, 2016 - 11:58 pm

Well done Dawn.

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:58 pm

Congrats Dawn! I hope you love it!

Laurie

November 18, 2016 - 11:58 pm

Interesting Janet, thanks! Yes I would like to hope that "the two Jane's" got along well. I'm sure that Lady Rochford needed a friend right about that time!

Sharon Conrad

November 18, 2016 - 11:58 pm

Congratulations Dawn. Happy reading.

Dawn Hatswell

November 18, 2016 - 11:58 pm

Oooh, Tim, you nice man. And thank you Janet for the book. Christmas come early x

Ceri Creffield

November 18, 2016 - 11:59 pm

And thanks Janet - some food for thought there.

Janet Wertman

November 18, 2016 - 11:59 pm

Lorna, that is a rumor. Could be true. I had fun with it in my book - I have Cromwell hearing it and not being sure whether he actually said it or not!

ADMIN Tim

November 18, 2016 - 11:59 pm

Thank you so much for coming tonight - and a special thank you to Janet Wertman as our guest expert of the month. Your expertise and time is very much appreciated.

Claire Ridgway

November 18, 2016 - 11:59 pm

Thank you to Janet for joining us tonight and for doing the wonderful talk on Jane Seymour. It's been fun and the talk was excellent.

Dawn Hatswell

November 19, 2016 - 12:00 am

Thanks folks, great natter tonight

Janet Wertman

November 19, 2016 - 12:00 am

Thank you Tim and Claire for hosting me! This was a blast@

Michelle Nasello

November 19, 2016 - 12:00 am

Good night all and sleep well.

Sharon Conrad

November 19, 2016 - 12:00 am

Thank you Janet. Good night everyone.

Elizabeth Clayton

November 19, 2016 - 12:00 am

Thank you very much everyone. I have never been in a chatroom before, so I was just enjoying all the conversation.

Laurie

November 19, 2016 - 12:01 am

Thank you Janet and everyone!

Ceri Creffield

November 19, 2016 - 12:01 am

Good night all.

Janet Wertman

November 19, 2016 - 12:01 am

Hi, Elizabeth! This was a bit of a first for me too!!

Janet Wertman

November 19, 2016 - 12:01 am

Thank you all for a wonderful experience

Lorna Wanstall

November 19, 2016 - 12:01 am

Thank you so much Janet, you will be very welcome to drop into our Tudor home any time

Claire Ridgway

November 19, 2016 - 12:02 am

Good night everyone and thank you for joining us!